GDPR Assessment

What is the GDPR Readiness Assessment?

Data protection is not just a matter of best-practice; failure to comply with current regulations could result in substantial fines and reputational damage. Our GDPR Readiness Assessment will equip your team with the knowledge and tools required to align existing processes with the requirements of the GDPR, and help them to better manage the ways in which you capture, process and store 'personal data'.

What is the Process?

We will need to spend between 3-5 days on site assessing your current situation against the requirements of the GDPR. Training will be provided during this time and guidance offered on areas such as data-mapping, cloud services and data protection. At the end of the readiness assessment your organisation will be issued a report detailing any actions that may need to be taken to align your processes with the requirements of GDPR.

From training to compliance, our range of services help organisations improve the way they manage personal data and meet legal obligations.

Privacy Principles:

Data should be processed lawfully, fairly & transparently

It should be considered whether data is limited by purpose

Data must be adequate, relevant & used only as is necessary

Data should be accurate and kept up to date

Data should be stored for no longer than is necessary

Data should be protected at all times against all potential risks
